

Andean Cocaine: The Making of a Global Drug
Thursday, May 28, 2009

Speakers' Bios

Paul Gootenberg, a former Rhodes scholar, is Professor of History and Director of Latin American and Caribbean Studies at Stony Brook University in New York. He is the author of a number of notable books on Andean economic, social, and intellectual history, including Between Silver and Guano: Commercial Policy and the State in Post-independence Peru. Gootenberg has been awarded a number of top research fellowships, including Guggenheim, ACLS, SSRC, and Wilson Center grants. Gootenberg obtained a Masters in Philosophy from Oxford University and a PhD from the University of Chicago.

Rensselaer W. Lee III is President of the consulting firm Global Advisory Services and a Senior Fellow at the Foreign Policy Research Institute. He was previously a research analyst at the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress, where he produced major reports on the Office of Homeland Security, terrorist finance, and Afghanistan's opium-heroin trade. A leading U.S. authority on these topics, Lee has written books on international crime and narcotics and nuclear security issues. His articles and commentaries have appeared in major journals such as Foreign Policy, Foreign Affairs, and Global Crime. Lee has performed overseas contract assignments for government agencies, including the State Department, the Department of Energy, and the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy. He holds a PhD from Stanford University.

Coletta Youngers is a consultant and Senior Fellow at the Washington Office on Latin America (WOLA) and an Associate with the International Drug Policy Consortium (IDPC). She served previously as WOLA's Senior Associate and Director of the Drugs, Democracy and Human Rights Project. Prior to her years at WOLA, Youngers was a project manager at Catholic Relief Services in Lima, Peru where she monitored and evaluated rural and urban development and human rights projects by Peruvian NGOs. She has written or edited numerous books, book chapters, reports and articles. She has also worked for the editorial staff of Latinamerica Press/Noticias Aliadas in Lima, Peru. Ms. Youngers earned a Masters in Public Affairs from Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School.