

Panelists

Ryan C. Hendrickson is Associate Professor of Political Science at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston, Illinois where he teaches courses in American foreign policy and international relations. His research interests include America's use of force abroad and the post-Cold War politics of NATO. He is author of The Clinton Wars: The Constitution, Congress and War Powers (Vanderbilt University Press), and over 25 journal articles and book chapters. He is also the past president of the International Studies Association-Midwest. He earned his Ph.D. and M.A. from the University of Nebraska, and his B.A. from Marquette University.

David Abramowitz is Democratic Chief Counsel for the House Committee on International Relations. Prior to joining the Committee staff in June 1999, he worked at the Office of the Legal Adviser of the Department of State for ten years on arms control, Middle East, and legislative matters. He earned his B.A. from Kalamazoo College and his law degree from the University of Michigan.

Robert Litwak is Director of the Division of International Studies at the Woodrow Wilson Center. He is former Director for Non-proliferation and export controls in the National Security Council during the Clinton Administration. He is author of Rogue States and U.S. Foreign Policy: Containment After the Cold War (Johns Hopkins University Press, 2000), and Security in the Persian Gulf: Sources of Inter-State Conflict (Rowman and Littlefield, 1981). He serves as an adjunct professor in the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University. He earned his B.A. in political science from Haverford College, and his Ph.D. in international relations from the London School of Economics.

Don Wolfensberger is Director of the Congress Project at the Woodrow Wilson Center. He is a former staff member in the U.S. House of Representatives (1969-1997), culminating in his appointment as chief of staff of the House Rules Committee in the 104th Congress (1995-97). He is author of Congress and the People: Deliberative Democracy on Trial (Johns Hopkins University Press, 2000), and a co-author of Democracy and the Internet: Allies or Adversaries? (Woodrow Wilson Center Press, 2002). He earned his B.A. from North Central College, and successfully completed his course work towards an M.A. in political science from the University of Iowa.