LEADERSHIP AND VISION

A Message from the President, Director and CEO of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars
Hon. Jane Harman

Established in 1977, the Latin American Program is part of the great legacy I inherited from my predecessor, the Honorable Lee H. Hamilton, when I became president of this institution. The Wilson Center honors the memory of Woodrow Wilson by bridging his two passions — scholarship and policy. At the Center, we bring together the thinkers and doers — policymakers, scholars, and business leaders — in the hope that frank and open dialogue will lead to better understanding, cooperation, and public policy.

Like other programs at the Wilson Center, the Latin American Program does not have a legislative or policy agenda. The Center is committed to bringing together policymakers, scholars, journalists, businesspeople, and civic leaders from throughout the Hemisphere in order to encourage open dialogue, improve the understanding of complex public policy issues of relevance to Latin America and its relationships with the United States, and build effective policies that improve the well-being of its people.

*A Message from the Chair of the Latin American Program Advisory Board
Dr. Tabaré Vázquez*

I am pleased to serve as the Chair of the newly-inaugurated Advisory Board of the Latin American Program of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. With committed and prominent leaders drawn from public life and the worlds of scholarship, business, and journalism, the Board has been formed to provide overall guidance regarding the content and direction of programming and research. It aims to foster partnerships with other institutions in the region and the United States, to deepen the understanding of critical issues facing the Hemisphere, and to further the cause of constructive engagement regarding the challenges faced by the countries of the Americas. The Latin American Program, one of the oldest at the prestigious Woodrow Wilson Center, is strategically positioned to further these goals.

For more than three decades, the Wilson Center's Latin American Program has earned a reputation for excellence in the scholarly and policy consideration of issues of democratic governance, poverty and inequality, citizen security, international relations, foreign policy, and conflict resolution and human rights. It is a widely-respected nonpartisan forum for experts from throughout the region and the world to discuss the most critical issues of our time.

This report demonstrates the achievements of the Latin American Program from 2009 through mid-2011 as well as the aspirations the Board and the Program share for the future. I am honored to be associated with the work of the Latin American Program and with the members of its distinguished Advisory Board.

A Message from the Director of the Latin American Program
*Dr. Cynthia J. Arnson

The Latin American Program and its institutes on Mexico and Brazil serve as a bridge between the United States and Latin America, providing a nonpartisan forum for experts from throughout the region and the world to discuss the most critical issues facing the Hemisphere. The Program sponsors research, conferences, and publications aimed at deepening the understanding of Latin American and Caribbean politics, history, economics, culture, and U.S.-Latin American relations. By bringing pressing regional concerns to the attention of opinion leaders and policymakers, the Program contributes to more informed policy choices in Washington, D.C., and throughout the Hemisphere.

The Latin American Program coordinates an active program of public meetings featuring scholars, analysts, and public officials from the United States, Latin America, and around the world. The Program and its related Institutes host scores of events each year in Washington, D.C., and throughout Latin America. These events allow researchers, members of the policymaking community, the media, and the general public to keep apprised of current thinking in and about Latin America on a broad range of critical issues.

The Program conducts outreach to members of the U.S. Congress and their staffs, aimed at broadening congressional understanding of key issues in bilateral U.S.-Latin American relations. In cooperation with the Wilson Center on the Hill project, the Program sponsors trips to the region for members of Congress as well as briefings for staff.

DEMOCRATIC GOVERNANCE

The Program's work on democratic governance focuses on questions of democratic quality, the relationship between democratization and internal armed conflict, and the resurgence of populism in specific countries and sub-regions. It also explores the impact of public policies to reduce poverty and inequality and enhance citizen participation and human rights. New research focuses on the ways that low levels of taxation and regressive forms of taxation and spending impact equality and inequality in the region. The Program's current approach builds on three decades of prior work on democratic governance at the Wilson Center, including path-breaking studies of the breakdown of democratic regimes, transitions from authoritarianism, challenges to the consolidation of democratic rule, decentralization, and fostering citizenship.

CITIZEN SECURITY

Crime, violence, and citizen insecurity challenge—and in extreme cases threaten—democracies throughout the Western hemisphere. Organized crime has penetrated and corrupted public institutions in many countries, and citizens throughout the region cite crime, along with unemployment, as the dominant concern of daily life. In collaboration with the Mexico Institute's security initiative, the Latin American Program is focusing special attention on the rise of organized crime in Central America. Even as conditions deteriorate in some countries, the region as a whole has accumulated significant experience in reforming and modernizing police forces and implementing policies to combat crime and address its root causes. The Latin American Program sponsors comparative research on local, national, and international public policies to address citizen insecurity and related policies to strengthen institutions and the rule of law.

WOODROW WILSON CENTER AND THE WASHINGTON POST FELLOWSHIP FOR LATIN AMERICAN JOURNALISTS

The Woodrow Wilson Center - Washington Post Fellowship for Latin American Journalists, launched in 2008, has provided 15 print and on line investigative journalists, 5 each year, from Latin America and the Caribbean with the opportunity to conduct three weeks of reporting on an issue of importance to the journalists' home countries. The fellowship immerses the recipients in the political culture of the U.S. capital, allowing them to develop sources of information, enter into direct contact with public and private institutions, and experience in situ how Washington operates. Fellows are housed at The Washington Post and receive mentorship from some of its top investigative and political reporters, as well as access to information, expertise, and resources that can take their reporting, and their careers, to the next level. Fellowships have been awarded to journalists from Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Jamaica, Mexico, Trinidad and Tobago, and Venezuela.

Two of the 2009 fellows, Diana Durán Núñez of El Espectador and Jamaican Observer reporter Ingrid Brown, won prestigious awards for the work they completed under the fellowship. Durán won the 2010 Inter-American Press Association's Pedro Joaquín Chamorro Award for best article on inter-American relations with a series focused on the extradition of Colombian paramilitary leaders to the United States. For her articles focused on the plight of undocumented Jamaican immigrants with HIV/AIDS who forego healthcare in the United States for fear of deportation, Brown won a United Nations Population Fund 2009 Caribbean Population Platinum Award.

SEGURIDAD CIUDADANA EN LAS AMÉRICAS: TENDENCIAS Y POLÍTICAS PÚBLICAS

The Latin American Program's Blog on Citizen Security in the Americas

In April 2009, the Latin American Program launched its specialized blog on citizen security: Seguridad ciudadana en las Américas: Tendencias y políticas públicas (Citizen Security in the Americas: Tendencies and Public Policy). The blog serves to bring attention to the work of researchers, security specialists, journalists, civil society organizations and politicians throughout the region. It aggregates news reports, studies, and other documents from countries throughout the region, serves as a core resource for those working in the citizen security arena, and disseminates and publicizes the activities and new publications of the Woodrow Wilson Center to a broad audience throughout the hemisphere.

Seguridad ciudadana en las Américas: Tendencias y políticas públicas is updated regularly with relevant and important news, articles and other materials. Since its launch, the blog has received more than 350,000 visits, averaging close to 500 visits per day with 2,500 posts organized by nearly 100 specialized technical topics.

MEXICO INSTITUTE

The Mexico Institute seeks to improve understanding, communication, and cooperation between Mexico and the United States by promoting original research, encouraging public discussion, and proposing policy options for enhancing the bilateral relationship. The Institute maintains an ongoing focus on five key issues in US-Mexico relations: Security Cooperation; Economic Integration; Migration and Migrants; Border Issues; and Energy and Natural Resources, and provides analysis of key issues in Mexico's politics and society for a US audience. In addition, the Mexico Institute has an ongoing focus on Democracy and Elections in Mexico, including its speaker series "Dialogues with Mexico/ Dialogos con Mexico", and maintains an active Congressional Initiative, a Public Policy Scholars Program, and a special initiative on transparency and Mexican Rural Development.

REGIONAL MIGRATION STUDY GROUP

The U.S. relationship with Mexico and much of Central America is defined to a significant degree by issues related to migration. Yet the United States and its neighbors have failed thus far to consider the most effective approach to build upon and smartly manage the region's human resources to common advantage. To develop and promote that vision, the Migration Policy Institute (MPI) and the Wilson Center's Latin American Program and Mexico Institute have convened a Regional Migration Study Group, co-chaired by former Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo, former U.S. Secretary of Commerce Carlos Gutierrez, and former Guatemalan Vice President Eduardo Stein. In addition to the co-chairs, the Study Group's membership consists of 17 high-ranking former officials, civil-society leaders, policy intellectuals and immigration specialists in the United States, Mexico, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras. Among the issues to be explored are safer and better functioning borders; more orderly migration flows that better serve the interests of all who engage, or are affected by, the migration system; the development and coordinated promotion of more efficient education and workforce-development systems; and new strategies to advance successful immigrant integration.

The Study Group had its first meeting in February 2011; it will commission and issue research over the next two years in preparation for final recommendations that will be released in early 2013.

BRAZIL INSTITUTE

The Brazil Institute strives to further bilateral understanding by promoting informed dialogue between these two diverse and vibrant multiracial societies in five ways: by convening policy forums that stimulate nonpartisan reflection and debate on critical issues related to Brazil; in promoting and sponsoring meetings of academics and policymakers and disseminating their research; by participating in the broader effort to inform Americans about Brazil through lectures and interviews given by the Institute's director; in appointing leading Brazilianists as Wilson Center scholars; and by maintaining a comprehensive website devoted to Brazil-focused news, analysis, research and reference materials.

TRADE AND ECONOMICS

Trade issues have mobilized civil society groups throughout the Americas, causing disputes within governments and ruling coalitions. Because trade-related reforms take place in the context of economic dislocations throughout the region, they have generated unprecedented debate over winners and losers in the process of globalization. The Program's trade initiative has explored the politics of free trade agreements in the United States as well as in Latin America, aiming to deepen the understanding of the distributional impacts of free trade and related public policies to enhance the positive impacts of trade liberalization.

FOREIGN POLICY AND INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In addition to focusing on U.S.-Latin American relations, the Latin American Program closely follows the foreign policy priorities and initiatives of Latin American countries themselves, the emergence of regional and sub-regional leaderships, the role of multilateral organizations such as the Organization of American States and UNASUR, and the widening of available options for political and economic insertion in a globalized world. Conferences and publications have explored patterns of political and economic relations with China, India, and Iran as well as the politics of energy development and integration.

MISSION STATEMENT

The Latin American Program and its institutes on Mexico and Brazil serve as a bridge between the United States and Latin America, providing a nonpartisan forum for experts from throughout the region and the world to discuss the most critical issues facing the Hemisphere. The Program sponsors research, conferences, and publications aimed at deepening the understanding of Latin American and Caribbean politics, history, economics, culture, and U.S.-Latin American relations. By bringing pressing regional concerns to the attention of opinion leaders and policymakers, the Program contributes to more informed policy choices in Washington, D.C., and throughout the Hemisphere.

The Latin American Program coordinates an active program of public meetings featuring scholars, analysts, and public officials from the United States, Latin America, and around the world. The Program and its related Institutes host scores of events each year in Washington, D.C., and throughout Latin America. These events allow researchers, members of the policymaking community, the media, and the general public to keep apprised of current thinking in and about Latin America on a broad range of critical issues

The Program conducts outreach to members of the U.S. Congress and their staffs, aimed at broadening congressional understanding of key issues in bilateral U.S.-Latin American relations. In cooperation with the Wilson Center on the Hill project, the Program sponsors trips to the region for members of Congress as well as briefings for staff.
